

Public Comment to Great Lakes Water Authority
November 29, 2017

The Upper Great Lakes Connecting Channels Study Final Report came out in 1988. In the thirty years much progress has happened. Areas of concern have been remediated to a great extent. However, the Detroit River has made very little progress.

Just as in 1988, the Detroit Wastewater Treatment plant is the biggest polluter in the Great Lakes. Two federal judges passed by leaving no accomplishments. Sooner or later we will have to deal with the unfinished business. Better later than never.

Saulius Simoliunas
665 W. Warren
Detroit, MI. 48201

313-465-5786